INDEPENDENT FASHION WEEK

Last week London transformed into a world of models, catwalks, champagne and designers for the bi-annual London Fashion Week, the most important event in the British fashion calendar, which closes on Wednesday September 21.

London has a rich history of fashion and is one of the 'top four' fashion capitals in the world, sharing this title with New York, Paris and Milan. You can certainly stand out from the crowd in London with a huge selection of independent fashion shops where you can buy limited collections, unique items and many vintage and second-hand items.

This week we are embracing the buzz of fashion week and are giving you a taste of 'alternative' fashion options our trendy capital has on offer, and these discounts and competitions will certainly tempt you. Get creative at free workshops, enjoy discounts on haberdashery to transform your clothes, look stylish in a new hat and learn about London's history of fashion. It's time to strut your stuff and re-vamp your wardrobe.

TRAID
(Textile Recycling for Aid and International Development) have many charity shops selling unwanted clothes all over London. At their flagship store in Camden, you can buy their TRAIIdremade range which is clothing reconstructed and redesigned as one-off pieces.

London has recently overtaken New York to rank number one in The Global Language Monitor's Top Fashion Capital of 2011.

KNOWLEDGE Nick the cabbie's London Fashion Tips!

In the latter part of the 17th century Huguenot silk weavers moved into the Spitalfield area of London to ply their trade. The Huguenots were notoriously volatile and when imported calico was in high demand, they would gather in groups and rip the gowns from any women wearing the fabric.

Savile Row is famous throughout the world for bespoke tailoring. A customer enquiring after a certain cloth may be told it had "been spoken for". The Tux was born here in 1886 when James Potter admired the Prince of Wales jacket at an informal dinner. He was delighted to learn that he could have one made by the Princes' tailors Henry Poole & Co (still at no. 15 Savile Row). He wore his new coat back home at The Tuxedo Club in New York where it proved hugely popular with the other members and in America it became known as a tuxedo or tux.

In 1870 the Japanese ambassador to the Court of St. James had a suit made for him in Savile Row. When he returned home - where they were unknown - he found his suit was a real hit, but as there was no word for it, they named it after the place of its' origin. Consequently the Japanese word for a suit is sebiro.

RECIPE FROM SEW OVER IT:

'The best Sewing chocolate cake recipe in the world'

Ingredients:

For the cake:

- 200g dark chocolate (70%), broken into small pieces |
- 140g butter, softened | 200g light muscovado sugar | 5 medium eggs, separated | 1tsp baking powder | 100g plain flour

For the icing:

- 250g dark chocolate | 1tbsp golden syrup | 100g unsalted butter

Method:

Melt the chocolate in a bowl over a pan of simmering water and set aside to cool slightly. Beat the butter and sugar until creamy using an electric mixer. Add the egg yolks, slowly. Gently stir in the baking powder and flour and then stir in the melted chocolate.

In a separate bowl, whisk the egg whites until they hold their shape, then gently fold into the cake mixture.

Tip the mixture into a baking tin lined with greaseproof paper. Bake in the oven at 180°C for 35 mins. Remove from the oven and cool.

For the icing, put all the ingredients in a bowl over a pan of simmering water until the chocolate and butter have melted. Stir and allow to cool.

Put the icing in the fridge and stir every 5 minutes, until ready to spread over the cooled cake.
